ABSTRACT

As part of the Harlandale Independent School District career education program, a resource speaker's guide was compiled to aid the teachers in the discussion of a particular profession. All the businesses listed can be arranged according to work clusters, work areas, and contact persons. The guide breaks down the information into three columns: business, areas, and executive. In the first column, the name of the business or type of business is specified. In the second column, the pertinent jobs are cited. The third column indicates the individual to contact for speakers. An additional section lists places of business where it might be possible to conduct field trips in the San Antonio area. (AG)

F O R E W O R D

The following information has been compiled from the business community to aid you in your approach toward the discussion of a profession. These business people have agreed to be resource speakers. Before contacting a speaker, please notify your principal. Each speaker requires a two week advance notice prior to a discussion. Check with your speaker to see if he will need you to provide any audio-visual equipment. Also, explain to the speaker what the grade level is. This will aid him in knowing at what level to make his presentation. When requesting a speaker, take time to see that the speaker knows where your school is located, and ask each to report to the principals office upon arrival at your school.

Field trips are to be arranged by making the request through the principal. The individual teacher is responsible for such trips. Field trips must be on school buses. The buses are available at 9:15 a.m. and must be back at the bus garage by 1:30 p.m. Career Education does not have the funds to pay for the field trip costs.

Due to a shortage of resource speakers from certain work fields, some occupations are not covered in this booklet; therfore, if the teacher would like to have a speaker from one of these areas contact Raymond Dickey, Community Involvement Coordinator, at 924-8272.

Supplements to this booklet will be sent to you during the school year.

COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT COMPONENT

In order that students receive the maximum benefit of a career education program, a planned working relationship should exist between education and the business-industrial community.

As an initial, all-important step, education must communicate with business. An understanding between business and education will lead to a bridging of the gap which has been prevalent for such a long period of time. Within any community, large or small, a working force representing many occupations exists. Guest resource speakers invited specifically to discuss their jobs can be asked to assist teachers in discussing careers. Businessmen will now have the opportunity to discuss topics such as problems that confront business, present job opportunities, future job opportunities, on-the-job training, job requirements, and the education needed that is important for advancement.

In bridging the gap between education and business, certain steps are necessary. Businesses in a community should be grouped into the fifteen work clusters as described bythe United States Department of Labor. All fifteen clusters need to be represented in order to have a genuine work force outlook. Each business should be contacted and told about career education. Businessmen will find the goals of career education beneficial to the future growth of their companies. Personal contact with business leaders has been found to be most effective. After the initial contact, each business should be asked to volunteer resource speakers. Professional businessmen add greatly to career concepts being taught by the teacher. Other organizations that should be sought to furnish guest speakers are military, civil service, labor organizations, construction firms, colleges, and universities.

A guest speaker usually will allow the topic to be tape recorded. This tape can be used by many classes, and a tape library develops.

A cordial work relationship between the career education program and a local Chamber of Commerce is beneficial as businesses will be made aware of the concept.

Presentations on career education before local civic, fraternal, social, and Parent-Teacher Associations will carry the career message to many individuals who may volunteer their services. Adequate use of the local newspaper, television station, and radio station will not only inform the community but could locate speakers.

A community involvement guide can be the end result. All businesses can be listed according to work clusters, work areas, and contact persons. This guide will assist the classroom teacher in discussing any career as the professional can be contacted and invited to contribute his professional knowledge to the educational setting.
